THE ROSE BALLOONS.

The most singular feature of the gift season this year is the success of the hydrogen balloons. These balloons, made of India rubber paper, colored red, [illegible] by degrees to complete and perfect inflation, and then placed, are the great occupation of the infantile world. A long string attached to the child's finger prevents them from mounting into the air, and thus held, while their tendency is naturally to mount up, they float about gracefully in the air. Their usual resting place, when not employed, is against the ceiling of the parlor or nursery, into which is their principal convenience as a plaything, they are always out of the way. Their expense to a purse is not so dangerous as might be supposed. They cost, according to size or the beauty of their coloring, from one to two [illegible]

Like all new inventions, the most singular incidents are likely to occur in their handling until they are understood. Among other incidents of a humorous character, the following is said to have occurred a few days ago on one of the exterior boulevards. Two work-women were carrying each between them a balloon to the store, they of those little [illegible] They were held in their hand by strings a few feet long, and thus were carried along in the air above their heads. One of the women was knocked down by a horse, and the other, going to the [illegible] lost her balloon into her own hands. She still had one hundred instead of fifty, and the [illegible] of the increased number was too much for her gravity; she was raised into the air. At the distance of a few feet from the ground, the woman thought it was better to lose the fifty balloons than to trust to an uncertain voyage towards the clouds, so she let go the fifty and the other fifty [illegible] fell to the ground without damage. Her fifty ride and balloons and her sixty or seventy [illegible] were soon lost sight of in the air.

The manner in which this popular novelty was [illegible] is singular. The inventor was an industrious [illegible] who had been reduced by bad speculations almost to the last sou. From the [illegible] of his employer there remained but a certain quantity of the Article necessary to fabricate hydrogen gas, and with these he no longer knew what to do. In trying to find a means of utilizing his gas, the idea of the balloons occurred to him. He bought first [illegible] and tried the experiment. Finding the enterprise a practical one, his first production was readily accepted by the toy merchants and as readily sold. The success was [illegible] At first easy, he received at once numerous [illegible] and he had the good sense to [illegible] the profits of his invention, he has already, in the space of three months, gained a clear profit of some 300,000 francs. [illegible] and money are so [illegible] the introduction of the rose balloon may [illegible] a sudden and handsome fortune.

[AN EXPLANATION AND AN EXPLANATION.

The fashionable journals in Paris, the Presse and the Pays, lately contained the following paragraph in their columns or city items: "Mlle. Zoe [illegible] the singer of the Opera Comique, has just [illegible] for Kamschatka." Two weeks previously it had been announced that she was about to sail [illegible] Bella is a fourth or fifth-rate singer, who earns a yearly salary of not more than six hundred dollars, whose name is scarcely known to the public, and it may be curious to you to know why the [illegible] journals, society themselves about so insignificant a person, and why it is necessary to announce with so much formality her withdrawal [illegible] Opera Comique.

Briefly: Mlle. Bella, M. Dumousseau, her partner, and his wife, were tried before one of the Paris tribunals for the crime of abortion, produced upon the person of Mlle. Bella. Dumousseau was condemned to five years' imprisonment, and his wife to five years' dungeon, while Mlle. Bella, by her conduct before the Court, gained its sympathy and was acquitted. The affair made a great deal of talk, on account of the position of some of the parties.

But why the announcement of the departure of Mlle. Bella in the journals? The notice is evidently a paid advertisement, and is susceptible of [illegible] Mlle. Bella hopes thus to [illegible] people of the [illegible] of her identity, and [illegible] the opera again under a new name, [illegible] Mlle. Bella certainly did [illegible] to the people of New-York that, [illegible] they are the only people that will engage [illegible] with a compromised reputation, [illegible] she is coming to you. She certainly did not mean to say that a damaged moral character [illegible] New-York than at Paris. Accepting the mysterious announcement, [illegible] for the return of Mlle. Bella [illegible] it is a sign of an improved state [illegible]

ALEXANDRE DUMAS AND HIS PUBLISHERS.

Alexandre Dumas commenced some months ago a suit against his publishers, Messrs. Michel Levy Brothers, and the journal La Siècle, which [illegible] the curious. According [illegible] the details of the trial as published by the [illegible] it appears that the Siècle and the publishing [illegible] Michel Levy have brought out [illegible] five years 285 volumes of the works of M. Dumas [illegible] treated and sixty-five volumes [illegible] that M. Dumas is still writing. He [illegible] the price of ninety volumes on [illegible] to be finished and sixty-five, or a sum of 736,000 francs.

But in this enormous parade of volumes, it must be recollected that M. Dumas' diluted style leaves [illegible] that his paragraphs [illegible] single lines exclamations, and [illegible] are [illegible] As he grows [illegible] more and more white paper on his [illegible] and it is curious, but, perhaps, not [illegible] coincidence, that his ideas, also, are [illegible] the same process of increasing transparency. The utter and deplorable failure of his [illegible] dramatic efforts shows this exhaustion of [illegible] of La Tour de Saint Jacques la Boucherie, [illegible] finally acquired the transposition, "The History of the Tower of St. James," fell dead at the Cirque the first night of its representation, and was only played subsequently as long [illegible] the house could be filled with partisans for or against the piece. As a literary or paying effort, [illegible] a failure; its only success was a success of [illegible] which cannot last many nights, even in [illegible] a city as Paris. The same may be said of [illegible] last piece, just brought out at the Gymnase Theatre, "Le Verou de la Reine." It is a complete and irremediable failure.

MEMOIRS OF MADAME DE MAINTENON.

The last number of the Correspondant closes up an [illegible] which excited no little interest in the literary [illegible] It was matter of astonishment to many that the Duke de Noailles, should become the biographer of Madame de Maintenon, but this [illegible] contains an extract from the third and unpublished [illegible] of the Memoirs, which explains [illegible] reason, the reason of the Duke's preference.

The [illegible] of Maintenon, situated in the department of the Deux-Sevres, was given by Louis XIV. to the widow Scarron, who passed into the hands of the family de Noailles, through the marriage of a member of this family with a niece of Madame [illegible] de Maintenon, a daughter of D'Aubigné, the worthless brother of the counselor and [illegible] Grand Monarch. A family interest, as you see, induced the Duke to [illegible]

M. de Lamartine has been [illegible] of an attack and an [illegible] La Presse announces in large letters on its first page that it will publish during the course of the year the following new works: La Dentelle, by Madame Girardin; Malheur Qui Dine, by Paul Feval, and My Brother, by A. de Lamartine. Where upon M. Armand Second, in his new journal exclaims: "What think you of this elegant, catholic and tender poet, who is going to recount to a million of readers the intimate history of his mother? Who tells the history of his mother at fifteen, or twenty thousand francs, and pockets the money without remorse? Who allows the name of his mother to be printed in company with that of La Vanielle and Madame Gil Blas, and does not blush with shame? A notary would certainly have more modesty than this illustrious poet!"

At the Variétés Theatre a piece has just been brought out which is a review of the important events of the year. In this piece a patriotic allusion is made to M. Lamartine, coupled with a condemnation of his detractors. The whole house spontaneously burst into a loud and long cheer for M. Lamartine, thus demonstrating that the memory of services to his [illegible] society under dangerous circumstances were not forgotten.

A NEW JOURNAL.

A new journal has just appeared called Follicules à Paris, of which Mr. Viard is Editor. An eloquent criticism of this journal appears in the columns of a contemporary in the following words: "The paper is beautiful.

"I saw the other day in the book-stall of a second-hand dealer in the European Bazaar the following startling manuscript label on an old English copy of Byron's life: "The Life and Loves of Lord Byron, with the snares and ruses he used to make them fall into his power." A little allowance must be made for the merchant's supposed ignorance of English.

The trial to which I have already referred, between a Lieutenant-Colonel of the French army and a widow to whom he was married, in extremis, has been decided in favor of the Colonel. The marriage was declared null on the ground principally that the civil part of the service had not been performed. This is a triumph of the State over the Church.

AN AMERICAN SHOT IN PRISON.

A most lamentable affair occurred this morning at the prison for debts ("Clichy," as it is called) in this city. An American merchant who was there confined illegally for debt, was shot dead, at the window of his cell by a sentinel. A good deal of excitement sprung out of the affair, and the authorities are keeping the particulars secret for the present. But so far as I have been able to learn, the facts are these: A new sentinel who had been standing guard previously at the Criminal prisons, had orders that when prisoners presented themselves at the windows, and refused after due warning to desist, he was to fire. In the present case the sentinel declares that the prisoner was warned six times before he fired, and that he did not fire until the prisoner peremptorily refused to withdraw. He pretends not to have known that the rules of military discipline were different in different prisons.

In this instance, the soldier was right, while the authorities who placed him there were wrong. At Clichy, there are one hundred and twenty debtors confined, and forty armed soldiers, not civil guardians, but soldiers of the regular service, to guard them! And they mount guard with loaded muskets. There is an exterior wall, and then a certain distance between this wall and the main building. To look out of the windows on this court and against the dead wall, one would suppose was not a great offence, especially in view of the fact that the prisoner was only a debtor, and that, too illegally confined; for the Court had only declared that day the illegality of the imprisonment, and he was within an hour of his release. But what are we to think of authorities who place forty armed soldiers with charged muskets to guard treble that number of debtors, and leave them with such rigorous orders of discipline as that which has been so unfortunately put into execution?

It is to be hoped that this circumstance will at last induce the French Government to modify its outrageously unjust law against debtors other than French citizens. A foreigner may be seized upon the complaint of no matter who, and for no matter what, anywhere in the streets of Paris, and thrown into Clichy the moment seized, without a word of hearing before a magistrate. He is imprisoned first and the complaint against him is examined afterwards. If it is found illegal, he has no recourse for false imprisonment, unless it is proved to be an imprisonment for some vengeance and completely without foundation. Many English Lords of immense wealth have thus been seized in Paris and thrown into Clichy for idle complaints. The outrageous imprisonment of Horace Greeley in this same prison, and the indecent mode of arrest, will be remembered by everybody. The present will be a good occasion for the Governments of England and the United States to urge upon the Government of France the necessity of placing their debtors upon the same footing in France as French debtors enjoy in the former countries.

P. S.—I have opened this letter to inform you that the person shot, this morning, at Clichy was Mr. Charles Morey, of Boston, the concessionaire for France of Mr. Goodyear's vulcanized India-rubber, and a gentleman well known to all the American residents of Paris. Mr. Morey was a man of about 32 years of age, who leaves a wife and children in a state of distress that may be easily imagined. He came to Europe three or four years ago a poor man, but a man with great business talent and immense energy of character. He soon created for Mr. Goodyear's invention so great a reputation in France and England, that he was announced to have acquired for himself in eighteen months' time a fortune of two million and a half of francs. He furnished a house in the Rue de la Paix at an expense of seventy-five thousand francs, drove the finest pair of dapple grays in Paris, liveried servants swarmed in the ante-chamber of this sumptuous residence, and no one who knew the dashing Charles Morey two years ago, would have ever dreamed that in two years time he would be shot down like a dog in the cell of a debtor's prison. He was a temperate and industrious man, and his first reverses commenced from the moment that a disagreement arose between him and the inventor of the vulcanized India rubber. It is not my province to judge of this discussion, nor, indeed, do I know the points in dispute; but it is gratifying to know that he was not imprisoned by Mr. Goodyear, a man whose kindness of heart is so universally recognized. The imprisonment came from a third party, and was upon paper indorsed by the deceased for Goodyear for a sum of one hundred and sixty thousand francs. He had been in prison three months, and, as I have above stated, was about to be released on a decision of one of the tribunals that it was an illegal detention. MALAKOFF.

Assassination of the Archbishop of Paris.

DETAILS OF THE CRIME.

From the Paris Moniteur, Jan. 4.

A dreadful crime has been committed in the Church of St. Etienne-du-Mont. After the procession had passed, and at the moment when it was returning into the sacristy, Monseigneur the Archbishop of Paris was stabbed with a dagger by a priest named Verger, who was recently interdicted from officiating.

The Archbishop was carried to the presbytery of St. Etienne-du-Mont, where, almost instantly afterwards, he breathed his last. The assassin was immediately arrested.

We cannot describe the deep emotion which was felt by the numbers of the faithful who were assembled in the church, or the mournful impression which was caused throughout Paris last evening, when the news spread of the death of this virtuous prelate.

From the Journal des Débats.

M. de Bonnal, curé of St. Etienne-du-Mont, preceded the prelate, and invited the assistants to kneel; he remarked a man upon his right who remained standing, but who, upon a sign from the curé, knelt with the others. The Archbishop, having returned on the left side of the church to bless the children, this man suddenly rose, seized M. Sibour forcibly with the right hand, made him turn round, and then plunged a dagger into his heart. The prelate staggered some steps backwards, exclaiming, "Le malheureux m'a tué!" and then sank to the ground. An extraordinary tumult arose, and cries of indignation were raised by the assistants, most of whom were women. The curé thinking that the Archbishop had been seized with sudden indisposition, exerted himself to [illegible] assistance and advised regards the prostrate [illegible] All upon the qui vive [illegible] not another [illegible] The crowd surrounded the assassin, who was [illegible] and bound by the [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] quality of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

ALBERT H. NICOLAY, Auctioneer.

$165,000.—STORE AT AUCTION.—FOR ROBERT H. NICOLAY will sell at auction at his regular semi-weekly sale of Stocks and Bonds, on THURSDAY, Jan. 29, at 12½ o'clock, at the Merchant's Exchange, $2,500 shares of the New-York, Pennsylvania and Lackawana Coal Company's stock. This Company has been chartered by the State of Pennsylvania. Their lands (666 acres in all) are situated in Luzerne County, Penn.; being in the centre of the noted Lackawanna Coal Field. They are about a square mile in extent, and midway between the great coal centres of Carbondale, Scranton, and Jessup. These lands are easy of access, besides the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company's Railroads, already running through the property, the Lackawanna and Lackawhore Railroad, (recently chartered and to connect with the Erie Railroad, and the Binghamton and Syracuse Railroad,) will pass over this property, so that coal can be taken direct from the mines to the interior of New-York State, and to the Atlantic Seaboard. The Company is provided with all the valley towns from Wilkesbarre to Carbondale, and from New-York distant but eight hours. The Lackawanna River, running half a mile through the property, affords an abundant water power for all mining and manufacturing purposes, and a sawmill is already in full operation on the lands of the Company. The property of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company immediately adjoins. That Company not long since obtained permission to investigate that portion of the property contiguous to their own; and they discovered a vein four feet thick but 23 feet from the surface to the bottom of the vein.

The property of this Company is in a direct location in an arable condition, and being situated near the centre of the great Lackawanna coal fields, every part is richly underlaid with thick and dense veins of the purest quality of anthracite coal, as per report of Prof. Roberts, who gives a calculation of 21,218,000 tons underneath the lands a part of which is above water-level. Wood abounds in this section of country, and the Company has a contract in hand with a few pins. Mr. E. Jones, the Mining Engineer of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Co., whose certificate is in my possession, has made a careful examination of these lands, and furnishes satisfactory evidence of the existence of coal, which opinion is concurred in by Mr. James Clarkson, well known as the owner of the Lackawanna Iron Works of Archbald, with a mining population of over 1,500 is already partly located on the land, and a great portion is now salable for town lots. The capital stock is $600,000, divided into shares of $50 each, fully paid up and subject to no assessments. The Stockholders are not personally liable for the debts of the Corporation.

The title is good, and this Company gives promise of great profits in the future.

The terms of sale are as follows: Ten per cent. on the day of sale, and the balance within ten days. For further particulars apply to ALBERT H. NICOLAY.

DR. MAGNIN'S LUCINA CORDIAL, OR ELIXIR OF LOVE.—This delightful and positive invigorant of the human system is fast superseding all other remedies; in fact, when its virtues become fully known it will be the only remedy in use. Its action on the nervous system and sexual organs is most extraordinary; allaying all over-excitement, and infusing into the nervous organization that degree of tension which it requisite to give the human system the enjoyment of its full powers, both mentally and physically. As a suppressant it is equally remarkable; assimilating
